Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The Frau Residence, at Calle Reina No. 107, is a raised, one-storey, stone, brick-masonry and plaster structure with a flat roof. It is located on the south side of the street between Calle Méndez Vigo and Calle Torres in the historic urban center of Ponce. In plan, the structure is organized in an inverted "L" shape around a side court at the rear-left.

An ample gallery raised on a local-stone podium spans the width of the facade, the central one-third portion projecting forward approximately six feet in a square form. Defining the balcony is a series of Corinthian columns raised upon a concrete balustrade, one at each intersection of two perpendicular planes. These columns support a full-entablature, ornate cornice and balustered parapet with pommels over each column.

Bilateral stairs access the verandah from either side of the projecting central section. The steps contain marble treads and polychrome tile risers.

Within the verandah, four bays are organized into an ABA rhythm of two paired, central bays flanked by singular bays at the extremes. Each bay is intricately articulated in the same manner: a circular arch defined by an ornate hood mould with floral and festoon plaster ornament above. Each bay contains wooden, louvered double-doors with ornate leaded-glass panels and a stained-glass fanlight.

Between the paired, central bays is an arriculate, full-relief, feminine bust sculpture occupying the spandrel area. Plaster ornaments composed of two small, circular medallions flanking a larger, central one decorate the areas between bays 1-2 and 3-4.

In plan, the living room, dining room, and finally a louvered gallery overlooking the side garden are disposed in sequence from front to rear. Bedrooms open onto the gallery around the court. Interior spaces are large and generally have high ceilings and the floors are covered with "Loza Isleña" (Native ceramic tile) in intricate designs. Of particular significance are the stained-glass panels found at the transoms of the main doors and the circular window in the bathroom.

Alterations have been limited to reversible wooden partitions within some of the interior spaces and the installation of modern, metallic "Miami" windows in some areas. The overall character of the interior spaces has not changed nonetheless, and the exterior remains faithful to the original design.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Frau Residence is a magnificent example of the architecture of Ponce's aristocracy of the late XIX and early XX centuries. This structure is one of the remaining symbols of Ponce's "Golden Period" in which landed families lived in the urban core and great immigrations from Europe, Latin America and the other Antilles had turned the originally small settlement into the cultural capital of Puerto Rico. The "Criollo Ponceño" or Ponce Creole architecture to which this building belongs is extremely important in itself since it represents the birth of a high-style native architecture, a hybrid of influences rather than the purely Spanish, or spontaneous vernacular expressions of previous centuries.

In particular, the Frau Residence is significant within this genre as it was designed by one of Ponce's most well-known architects, Blás Silva. Silva was particularly renowned among the wealthy classes of the period. His buildings can usually be characterized by what is popularly referred to as "wedding-cake architecture" of the landed nouveau riche, for the richness of ornament and detail. Other buildings by Silva include the Monsanto Residence (NR-Po-06-84-7) and the Salazar-Candal Residence (NR-Po-06-84-18), both in process of nomination.

The Frau Residence is one of Silva's most reserved houses, architecturally, as it is relatively simple and not as richly detailed as others. Rather, it relies more upon scale and form, and the beauty of the classical elements themselves, more than upon the applied ornamentation to portray the prominence of the original residents. It also remains very faithful to the traditional vernacular house type of the region, in plan and in execution, resulting in a graceful, refined version of the one-storey, full-width front balcony house of the southern coast of Puerto Rico. In addition to the local influences, Silva reflects the interests of the Arts and Crafts movement and the academicism of the Ecole des Beaux Arts in the facade treatment, resulting in an austere and grand, yet lightweight elevation. Thus, Silva, as had other foreign-trained architects, succeeded in integrating classical education with the traditional elements of the Spanish Caribbean.

Because of its location only two blocks away from the urban plaza, the Frau Residence forms a principal and integral part of the historic urban core of Ponce.
